

JACQUES HENRI LARTIGUE

1894

13 June, Jacques Lartigue is born in Courbevoie, near Paris, in the home of his parents, Marie Haguët and Henri Lartigue. His older brother, Maurice, nicknamed «Zissou,» was born on August 2, 1880. They are considered one of the wealthiest families in France.

1900

Jacques Lartigue uses his father's camera to take his first photos. He starts noting his thoughts and impressions on scraps of paper. This is the beginning of his diary.

1902

Henri Lartigue gives Jacques his first camera : a 13x18 cm model with a manual shutter. The young boy takes and develops photographs on his own and starts pasting them into albums, the contents of which he later reorders. In all, he would leave put together 130 of these books.

1904

The cameras given to him by his father are increasingly sophisticated, light and easy to handle. Now he can shoot anything, even in motion. He can also create a three-dimensional effect using a stereoscopic camera (in the years up to 1928, he takes some 5,000 stereoscopic pictures).

He learns how to use multiple exposures and photographs "ghosts";

1907

Fascinated by flying machines, Jacques and his brother begin to make frequent trips to airfields. They witness the test flights of the first airplanes.

1908

Thanks to Jacques's membership card for the Ligue Aérienne, a club to which all the pilots of the day belong, he is able to photograph such notable early aviators as Garros, Latham, Paulhan, Lefèvre, Farman and Blériot.

1911

During the course of his strolls in the Bois de Boulogne, Lartigue photographs the fashionable "élégantes"; He sells his first pictures, to the newspaper La Vie au Grand Air.

1912

Lartigue acquires a new stereoscopic camera, a folding Nettel 6x13 which allows him to take panoramic views. His father gives him a Pathé film camera. The following year he sells his first sports films to a newsreel company.

1913

In January, he photographs Santos-Dumont, Graham White and Max Linder at Saint-Moritz.

1914-1918

January: in Chamonix, he takes film footage and still photos of the brother of Ferdinand de Lesseps on his propeller-driven sled.

August 3: Germany declares war on France. Jacques Lartigue is deferred from the draft for reasons of health.

Jacques Lartigue decides to become a painter and attends the Académie Jullian.

May 19: he meets Madeleine Messager, whom he nicknames "Bibi";

1919

December 17: Jacques Lartigue marries Madeleine Messager. Her father, the composer André Messager, is a former director of the Opéra Comique in Paris, Covent Garden in London and the Paris Opera.

1921

His father buys a Hispano-Suiza 32 HP. Jacques makes much use of the car to travel around France.

He devotes more and more time to painting: bouquets, gardens and portraits are his favorite themes.

He produces his finest autochrome plates in the park of the Château de la Garoupe, on the Côte d'Azur.

August 23: birth of his son, Dani.

1922

Lartigue exhibits at the Galerie Georges Petit and at several Parisian art salons. This is the beginning of his career as a painter. He meets the colorist Kees Van Dongen.

Also at this time, he makes the acquaintance of Maurice Chevalier and the film director Abel Gance, who on several occasions suggests that they work together.

This is also the beginning of his friendship with two French stage stars, Sacha Guitry and Yvonne Printemps.

1923

His father experiencing financial issues, he sells the family castle in Rouzat. Jacques looks for a job but quits after three days, unable to let go of his freedom.

1924-1929

Birth of his second child, Véronique. Yvonne Printemps and Sacha Guitry are the godparents. The baby lives only a few months.

1930

March: Jacques Lartigue meets Renée Perle, a model of Romanian origin. For the next two years she is his companion and his favorite model for paintings and photos.
He exhibits once again at the Galerie Georges Petit and at the Salon d'automne.

1934

March 12: he marries Marcelle Paolucci, or "Coco", as she is called. Her father is head electrician at the Cannes and Deauville casinos.

1935

Lartigue has acquired a certain reputation as a painter – and now has to earn a living with his art. Like Van Dongen and Picabia, he offers his services as an interior decorator, working on the galas at the Cannes casino: "Fleurs et Papillons", "Gala multicolore", "Grande Duchesse" and "Marché aux fleurs", etc. His exhibition of portraits (Van Dongen, Sacha Guitry, Marlene Dietrich, Georges Carpentier and Joan Crawford) at the Galerie Jouvène in Marseille is a great success.

1942

January 12: he meets Florette Orméa in Monte Carlo.

1945

August 28: he marries Florette Orméa.
The couple divides its time between Paris and Piscop in Val-d'Oise.

1946

September : Lartigue attends the first Cannes International Film Festival, originally planned for 1939. Long a habitué of the film studios, he becomes an annual fixture at this event.

1950

He acquires a Rolleiflex 6x6 and starts taking color shots again, selling a number of photos to the press.

1953

While a guest of André Dubonnet at Cap d'Antibes, he meets a young, little-known American Senator, John F. Kennedy. Ten years later, the issue of Life magazine covering JFK's assassination also carries the first major article on the photographer Jacques Henri Lartigue.

1954

Foundation of the society Gens d'Images with Lartigue as vice-chairman.
Albert Plécy publishes Lartigue's photos in Point de vue et Images du Monde.

1955

Gens d'Images organizes a photography show at the Galerie d'Orsay in Paris with works by Brassai, Doisneau, Man Ray and Lartigue.

1957

Jacques travels to Havana with Florette for an exhibition of his paintings. Fidel Castro and his guerrillas have just begun their campaign in the Sierra Maestra. Jacques is forced to leave his canvases behind when he journeys on to Mexico and New Orleans.

1960

Lartigue buys and moves into a house in Opio, near Grasse.

1962

While in New York, he presents his early 20th-century photos to Charles Rado of the Rapho agency and to John Szarkowski, Director of the Photography Department at the Museum of Modern Art.

1963

Exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art, New York, entitled The Photographs of Jacques Henri Lartigue. Publication of a portfolio in Life. His reputation as an outstanding photographer has been established.

1974

26 August : Jacques Henri Lartigue is appointed official photographer to mark Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's seven years as president.

1975

First French retrospective of Lartigue's work at the Musée des Arts Décoratifs de Paris : Lartigue 8x80.
Jacques does photo shoots for fashion and decoration magazines. He takes photographs in Guernsey during the filming of « Adèle H » by François Truffaut with Isabelle Adjani.

1979

June 26: Lartigue signs over his entire photographic output to the French government.

1980

The donation is celebrated by an exhibition, Bonjour Monsieur Lartigue, at the Galeries Nationales of the Grand Palais, Paris. Then it goes on world tour.

1986

September 12: death of Jacques Lartigue in Nice
